The exhibit is based on new research and stories that have never been heard, and it will showcase actual artwork that was exhibited at Woodstock in 1969. Art was a large part of the festival. It has been described as looking like a battlefield. There were piles of soggy blankets, beers cans, and nearly 6,000 shoes. Well, forward 50 years and you would still be amazed by how much trash is left. Except today, we call the trash artifacts and it takes a team of archaeologists to document it. This lecture will illustrate the work to document and reconstruct the Bindy Bazaar and the Playground two areas that were integral to the Woodstock festival experience but rarely talked about.
